

CORONER'S JURY AT DEVON TO PROBE GAS FLAME THEORY

Testimony to Be Taken Regarding the Open-Flame Gas Stove
WAS USED FOR HEAT
Theory is Strengthened by Similar Stories Told To Authorities

PHILADELPHIA, April 7.—(INS)—The gas-flame theory regarding the cause of the disastrous blasts at the Devon plant of the Pennsylvania Fireworks Display Company, Inc., as carried exclusively by International News Service last Friday will be submitted to the coroner's jury when it meets at Malvern again today.

Testimony, regarding the open-flame gas stove believed to have been burning at the time in the central building of the nine structures comprising the plant, will be given by Sullivan Glanone, 24-year-old joint owner of the Norristown Fireworks Company, and a former employee of the Devon firm, Coroner Herbert Ford announced.

Glanone declared that an open-flame gas stove was kept burning summer and winter in the main building. It was used to heat the room and for warming glue, he said. He worked at the plant being employed with several other employees at a long table in the room with the gas stove and left the plant because he was "afraid for his life," Glanone said.

The gas-flame theory of the blasts has been strengthened by similar stories told the authorities by other persons familiar with the plant. Police Chief Nugent, of Stratford, said to have taken a statement from a Bryn Mawr fireman who declares that he once saw the flame and went to the basement of the office building and shut off the gas supply.

Pieces of a gas stove and two open pet-cocks will be introduced at the inquest today to prove that such a stove existed. Open pet-cocks indicate it was burning, officials say.

Testimony given by Victor Vardaro, 23-year-old son, of Alexander Vardaro, manager and president of the firm, will be re-checked when the inquest re-opens, according to Coroner Ford. "There is no doubt," Ford said, "that young Vardaro is both lying and not telling all he knows."

MAN COULD LIVE FOR TWENTY YEARS ON BATTLESHIP WITHOUT GOING ASHORE

(This is the last of a series of articles on the United States Battle Fleet written by a special correspondent for the Courier and International News Service, who recently made a cruise aboard the U. S. S. Tennessee.)

By William Parker

U. S. S. TENNESSEE, Apr. 7.—It would be possible for a person to live aboard an American battleship similar to the Tennessee for the 20 year life of the ship without coming ashore for any purpose.

A battleship has most of the conveniences of a town. Its bake shop has a daily capacity of 2,400 pounds of bread. The cobbler's shop can make shoes, the tailor's shop uniforms. Experienced physicians are aboard, and hospital quarters are clean and comfortable.

The Tennessee has a cruising radius of one complete voyage around the world and one-quarter more of that distance, with a single loading of fuel oil at the beginning of the cruise.

Fresh provisions, such as meat, vegetables, milk and butter are kept in cold storage for six weeks, but "dry" stores, such as canned food would last six months.

"Dry" stores, according to Smith Hempstone, Supply Officer of the Tennessee are just as good as fresh food, but do not offer the same variety. Hempstone, who carries the title of Commander, formerly was a newspaper man in Washington, D. C.

Although the government furnishes practical necessities for the more than 1300 men and officers aboard, the personnel on each ship supply added conveniences. A tradition of the navy requires officers to feed themselves, a small allowance being made by the government for this purpose. The officers pay approximately $1 each per day for food. Waiters are Filipino boys who have enlisted for four years. These boys also are body servants for officers, one boy looking after the uniforms, shoes and staterooms of several officers. Cigars and cigarettes are obtained from the "cigar mess" at wholesale prices.

The crew is fed by the government.

"BILLY" SUNDAY TO SPEAK AT SOUTH LANGHORNE

Famous Evangelist to Conduct Two Services There On Friday, April 11th

EXPECT LARGE CROWD

SOUTH LANGHORNE, Apr. 7.—The Rev. William A. (Billy) Sunday will invade Bucks County on Friday, when he will open a series of two meetings here.

The meetings will be held in the Oakhurst Chapel and the fighting evangelist comes to the small community because of his personal friendship with C. D. Oakley, sponsor of the chapel.

The evangelist will speak first at 2:30 in the afternoon and will deliver his second sermon at 7:30 in the evening. Special musical numbers will be given by the Oakhurst Chapel orchestra.

The Rev. "Billy" Sunday and "Ma" have just concluded an evangelistic campaign in Philadelphia. While there the evangelist was visited by Mr. Oakley who explained to him the efforts being made to permanently establish the Oakhurst Chapel, here. Mr. Sunday was very much interested and almost at once agreed to set aside one day to speak in the church of his friend. Friday, April 11th, was the open date, and on this day Mr. Sunday and perhaps his wife will come here.

It is believed that this is the first time that the evangelist has spoken in such a small community as he is in constant demand by the larger cities.

MUTT SHOW HERE WILL BE CONDUCTED MAY 6TH

Bucks County S. P. C. A. Will Join With Boys' Week Committee and Travel Club

COMMITTEE IS NAMED

The publicity already given to the proposed plan of the Boys' Week committee to hold a Mutt Show in connection with the big annual event is attracting much attention not only in Bristol but elsewhere throughout Bucks County, as well.

The Boys' Week Committee chairman, M. J. Hill, is in receipt of a letter from a resident of Doylestown. In the communication it is stated that the article published in the Courier concerning the Mutt Show was read with much interest.

The letter also states that the Bucks County S. P. C. A., in conjunction with the Boy Scouts, is planning a series of mutt shows in Bucks county. The exhibitions are to be held in six populous centers and Bristol is listed for May 6th.

The matter has already been taken up with the Travel Club and the Boys' Week Committee is asked to cooperate in this event rather than to stage a separate affair.

After giving the matter much discussion it was decided to work along with the S. P. C. A. and the Boy Scouts and Travel Club and the Mutt Show held here May 6th will be a joint affair.

Boys of Bristol are urged to begin at once to groom their pet mutts and get them ready for the big show. Prizes and ribbons will be the awards and every boy will want his mutt to capture the honors.

The committee having the affair in charge for the Boys' Week Committee consists of John Colton, Edward McJolly, John H. Hardy, Richard French.

ANDALUSIA REPUBLICANS CORRECT STATEMENTS

Republican Club Members Claim That News Accounts Were Incorrect

CITE FACTS IN THE CASE

ANDALUSIA, Apr. 7.—The members of the Republican Club of Andalusia wish to correct statements made in the public press on April 3rd and April 4th and with fair play and justice to all candidates request the publishing of the following true facts:

At the March 27th meeting held at the home of Mr. Dunk there were 104 members present after combining. A majority vote decided at this time to call a special session the following week for the purpose of endorsing a committee-man and woman, it being understood according to the application card signed by each member, that the majority should rule in all cases, and the two endorsed should have the full support of all members at the coming election.

On April 2nd this meeting was held, officially, the president, Mr. Curtis, presiding. Much discussion was held at this time as to the advisability of considering Mrs. Lathrop and Mr. Dunk for the endorsement of the club as it was rumored they had already filed their nomination papers, thus violating their obligation. This meeting attended by 100 members, 92 of them voting, endorsed Mrs. Schnupp and Mr. Katzmar.

The statement that Torresdale Manor dominated the meeting can best be refuted by the voting list checked as each vote was cast. This list indicates that 24 voters were residents of the Manor and 68 were from other sections.

These statements are O. K. according to the minutes of the club.

MAY K. SCHNUPP,
Secretary.

TRUCK LEAPS ONTO SIDEWALK; KNOCKS BOYS OFF THE STEP

Reckless Driver Loses Control of Machine and Injures Young Lad

KNOCKS DOWN PORCH

Youngsters Leap to Safety — One Nearest Machine Is Injured

Two women were hurt when the automobile in which they were riding was crashed into by another car just south of Mill street and a boy was injured when a delivery truck ran up onto the sidewalk on Buckley street and knocked him from the porch step on which he was sitting, Saturday afternoon.

The injured: Neal Mulhearn, 220 Buckley street. Injuries about the arm, jaw, body bruises and two fingers crushed.

Mrs. William G. Wilkie, Sr., Rose avenue and China road, Croydon.

Mrs. Harold Heath, Croydon.

Saturday afternoon five little boys sat upon the bottom step of the porch of the house of Noss Shatzler, 300 Buckley street. The group was comprised of Neal Mulhearn, Jack Duffy, Leonard Dugan, John Dugan, John Kervick, Buddy Breslin. The five were talking things over when suddenly a delivery truck of the Safety Wet Wash driven by Joseph Gibson came dashing down the street at a reckless speed. The truck swerved from the roadway and ran up onto the sidewalk and crashed into the porch where the children were sitting. Four of the youngsters jumped but Mulhearn could not get out of the path of the car as he was the nearest to it. He was knocked down and bruised.

Gibson is colored and resides at 428 Pond street. Witnesses claim that he was driving in a most reckless manner.

Gibson was placed under arrest and given a hearing before Justice James Gay. He was charged with reckless driving and fined $15. He was held under $500 bail on the charge of assault and battery by automobile. He will receive a further hearing on April 19th.

This is the second time that young Mulhearn has been injured by an automobile. A brother was also seriously hurt when struck by a car some time ago, and the lad's father was killed at the shipyard here about ten years ago.

The porch of the Shatzler property was considerably damaged.

X-ray pictures will be taken of the Mulhearn boy's injuries today to determine their full extent.

Saturday afternoon, at about 5:15, Mrs. William G. Wilkie, Sr., Rose avenue and China road, Croydon, accompanied by Mrs. Harold Heath, of Croydon, was driving to Bristol. As the car operated by Mrs. Wilkie reached a point just south of Mill street it was sideswiped by the machine of William A. Fox, 551 Fishers avenue, Philadelphia. Both Mrs. Wilkie and Mrs. Heath were shaken by the impact and were taken to Dr. Wagner's hospital.

Fox was placed under arrest and pronounced under the influence of liquor by the examining physician.

Fox was given a hearing before Justice Edward Lynn and held under bail to await the outcome of the injuries of the two women.

SIXTH WARD BOYS!

All boys of the Sixth Ward are urged to meet tonight at the high school grounds at six o'clock. Meetings are to be held every evening at the same time and place so as to prepare for Boys' Week. Boys, be sure and be on hand.

Plans to Restore Historic Mansion

Arlington House, the home of the Curtis and Lee families, is to come into its own again. The Secretary of War has been authorized by Congress to restore it to the condition in which it existed prior to the Civil War. The work is under the supervision of the quartermaster-general and his office. After standing empty and bare since the days when the Union armies were quartered there, the dignified old mansion, where lived General Robert E. Lee and his wife, daughter of George Washington's adopted son, with white trimmings. The portico is supported by eight columns, made of brick and covered with stucco. Since after the conclusion of the Civil War, the Lee family left Arlington, shortly the house has been used as quarters for the caretakers of Arlington Cemetery, but it had gradually fallen into a state of pathetic neglect that obscured almost all of its former glories.

It is hoped to furnish the rooms very much as they were when, at the height of their glory, and already the office of the Quartermaster-General has received some magnificent original pieces. Donations include bedroom and dining room furniture, table silver and a sideboard believed to have been part of the original furnishings of the house that has become a national shrine.

Arlington House, with memories and glorious traditions inextricably woven into the fabric of our national history, has come into its own again. After standing pathetically bare and desolate since the grim and momentous days when men of the Union armies were quartered there, the lovely old mansion now stands in all the splendor of restored beauty and dignified splendor. Strolling through its spacious, high-ceilinged rooms, it becomes quite easy to visualize ladies in crinolines and lace and gentlemen richly dressed, dancing the minuet at a party given by George Parke Custis, the adopted son of George Washington, and grandson of Martha. It was under a beautifully moulded arch, separating the large parlor from the family dining room, that his daughter, Mary Ann Randolph Custis, was married to General Robert E. Lee in 1832.

Arlington House is one of the most pretentious examples of early American architecture, and is believed to have been designed by George Hadfield, who built the north wing of the Capitol. From its front portico a wonderful view of Washington can be obtained, as the house stands on an elevation nearly 300 feet above the Virginia side of the Potomac, near the end of the magnificent new Arlington Memorial Bridge. The house has two wings, built, it is believed, in 1802, while the whole mansion was completely finished by 1830. It is fashioned of brick and stucco, produced on the grounds nearby the house, under the supervision of Mr. Custis himself. The house is painted in soft yellow

JOKES AND JOKERS

When one hears "A good time was had by all" it is customary to wonder what in Heaven's name has become of the poor wretch who furnished it. Where does he now conceal his shame or nurse his bruises? Because in this jovial world few jokes that have no victim are good, few quips that do not find their point in a heart. Most practical jokes come near to being tragic to some one.

Oh, these roguish spirits! How many fulfill their lives in devising innocent and original ways of causing pain, embarrassment, shock and fear! Yes, the world is full of normal, healthy souls going about giggling like iblis at any misfortune or acute discomfort, and if they fail to find it they always stand ready to invent it for amusement's jolly sake. Making of pain a jest and of a jest a pain. "The darker the crime," one can imagine them snickering in their good-natured way, "the deeper the joke."

America, they will tell you, needs more wholesome humor to relieve it of its tedium and sorrows—anything from a blush to septic poisoning will do as a starter. And sometimes to prove they can be serious if they wish they will stare at an idiot and remark "Poor fellow, what a shame to be in his condition." And they don't know the half of it.

What a pity the prank and practical joke do not amuse the victim as well as the jolly fellows who perpetrate them. But greater pity 'tis that the unappreciated are omitted.

FOG IMPERILS FLYERS

Thick fogs have delayed virtually every transcontinental and trans-oceanic flight attempt. The recent transcontinental air races were made hazardous by fogs. Nature's "smoke screens" forcing several planes down and causing others to lose their course. Fog prevented Commander Byrd from landing the monoplane America after he had successfully flown from New York to Paris. Fog constitutes one of the terrors of aviators, and thus far attempts to combat or dispel it have been unsuccessful.

Years ago, Sir Oliver Lodge thought he had solved the problem of fog dispersal with an electrical apparatus that he set up on his housetop. It didn't work. Repeatedly London has considered blowing away her fogs with high explosives. Attempts failed in Italy. Everything has been experimented with from placing oil in the streams to all sorts of electrical contraptions.

Until means are found to dispel fog aviators must learn to fly through it, aided only by such mechanical contrivances as may serve to make their senses more acute. Lighted beacons with fog-penetrating properties have been developed and promise to be of great service in guiding pilots to safe landings on fogbound fields. The radio beacon, together with the automatic height indicator, fulfills a somewhat similar function. Fog is still the terror of the air.

What has happened to the old-fashioned Paris fashions?

Why this unseemly effort to obtain human fossils? They can be found hereabouts and no excavation needed.

'GENERAL CRACK'

BY GEORGE PREEDY

Copyright 1928 by Dodd Mead & Co., Inc.

The Warner Bros. & Vitaphone production starring John Barrymore, is based on this novel.

SYNOPSIS

General Crack, soldier of fortune, has revolted against Emperor Leopold, the instant after fulfilling his obligation of seeing him crowned emperor. Now he lays waste the land, in revenge for Leopold having compromised Crack's girl-wife, the lovely Princess Eleanora, whom Crack had to leave for the campaign, the instant after marrying her. The Empire is dismembered, and Leopold in flight. Crack captures the Archduchess Maria Luisa, Leopold's sister, and informs her he must have revenge by spending the night with her.

"Monsieur," she said, "I were to tell you one thing, would you let me go? I, too, have lost in love; I, too, have found that love can sting. That is your case, I think!" she added, simply, peering into his inscrutable face. "I believe that the Princess Eleanora must be dead."
"I hope," whispered Christian, "that she is dead."

XXIII

MARIA LUISA did not answer that; at last she knew what he meant, what it had all meant, from the day he had ridden out of Frankfurt, a declared rebel; through all her guarded pieties, her romantic decorums, she had learnt what is the one thing worse than death for a woman; and he wished that Elea-

Her confession surprised him.

nora was dead, he who had paid such a high price for her . . . and Leopold had covered her . . . and had taken her, behind this man's back; foul, foul dishonor, thought Maria Luisa, giddy with the shock of this fell discovery, and no marvel that they were in the mire; what manner of pestilent sweet creature was this Eleanora that such a downfall had been possible? "You are moody," he said, "sultry, perhaps; will these change your humor?"

He put his hand into his inner pocket, and brought out a lustre of green tangled fire that caught up the brilliancy of the flames on the hearth.

"Nothing so costly," added Christian, "but with cost can be bought—do these induce your smiles?"

He tossed two gems to her that fell in the lap of her stained habit; she saw two diamonds, one of exultant beauty, and recoiled.

"They were hers," she stammered.

"And shall be yours—a fair price even for Caesar's sister, eh?"

"All women cannot be bought; she shook the stones to the floor."

"No?" Christian picked up the diamonds and held them dangling before the violent, leaping fire.

"Come, wear the jewels; somehow we'll strike the bargain equal yet—perhaps he took them from her bosom—I'll set them in yours."

Maria Luisa did not stir; she was hardly conscious of any insult or outrage in what he said.

Surely he had forgotten her in that deep reverie evoked by the cold fires of the Mitau diamond, now she might creep away; she rose awkwardly, as if her limbs were cramped, and reached out a shaking hand for her tumbled fallen coat; but on this movement Christian turned at once.

"Not so easily. I must command your company."

"What," she replied, "can prevent me from leaving you?"

"Madame, a locked door." "Maria Luisa stood with her hand on the back of the yellow sofa.

GRAND THEATRE

"The Sacred Flame," Warner Bros. and Vitaphone all-talking picture, starring Pauline Frederick with Conrad Nagel, comes to the Grand Theatre tonight and Tuesday. This amazing story of mother love and other love—is from the famous stage play of Somerset Maugham. Maurice Taylor of the Royal Flying Corps (Conrad Nagel) is hopelessly injured in a plane crash, immediately following his marriage. His young wife attends him faithfully for three years, at which time a younger brother returns from South America, and before long he and the wife are passionately in love and planning to go away together.

The mother of Maurice (Miss Frederick) sees the state of affairs as also does the nurse, who secretly loving the invalid, hates the wife for what seems to her a careless attitude toward her husband's patiently-borne sufferings. The evening before the proposed elopement, Maurice speaks so feelingly to the guilty two, that they decide not to go.

The next morning the nurse announces that Maurice is dead, and accuses some one of his murder. Finally the mother explains the way of her adored son's passing. The play is intensely dramatic and played and directed with deep understanding. Others in the great cast are Lila Lee, William Courtenay, Alec B. Francis and Dale Fuller. Harvey Thew did the adaptation. Archie Mayo directed.

COMMUNICATION

Editor, Courier.

Sir:—In the editorial of April 3rd, entitled "Normal Boys," the statement is made that a normal boy delights in killing or stoning little helpless animals. That the average boy does enjoy this "manly sport," far be it from me to deny, for having observed the direction in which his mind runs, it is not hard to credit. However, if my understanding of the word "normal" is correct, such boys are not normal. To be normal he must be healthy, either of mind or body. Neither those traits of man exhibiting cold-blooded, callous fiendishness, or those of self-centeredness or selfishness are normal.

Quick, thoro and lasting, we make your car once more weatherproof with a new deck of the best material and workmanship.

ones, even if universal. There is no normal child so young that he fails instinctively to comprehend the pathos and appeal with which every dumb animal, rodent, or reptile is surrounded, and if he fails to do so, he is utterly abnormal. Yet—that any child should be taught everything but kindness and consideration, and allowed to remain in ignorance of the services which animals have rendered to man, since the beginning of time, and of the fiendish wrongs and base ingratitude with which they have been repaid, is to stress materialism at the expense of humanitarianism, and to supply him with knowledge of everything but the most essential elements. Normal or abnormal, it is necessary to impress upon his mind that to inflict needless suffering on any dumb animal, is to be guilty of the most dastardly thing in the world.

FUGAZY COMES BACK AS FIGHT PROMOTER

By Davis J. Walsh

I. N. S. Sports Editor

NEW YORK, Apr. 4.—Hope, they say, springs eternal in the human breast and this must be so because Humbert J. Fugazy, to whom hope should be a forsaken memory, is understood to be contemplating an early return to the promotion of boxing. With Fugazy, optimism isn't a virtue. It apparently is an affliction.

Less than five years ago, he was a rich man without a care in the world and the leisure with which to enjoy life as he found it. Then he allowed himself to be pushed into the promotion of a benefit show, scored an instantaneous success—and was lost. From that moment onward, he no longer was a conservative business man with a comfortable private income; he was thrust out in front of the public and so was his fortune. It apparently became as public as the town pump at which everybody helps himself.

In the years that followed, Fugazy became known as the Promoter Who Never Got a Break. If he scheduled a show, it was rained out of countenance night after night until everybody lost interest. If he tried to make a deal, some chiseler would whittle his way in and strip the man down to his waistcoat.

Luck was against him, they said, and for once they were not far wrong. Actually the promoter was broken definitely by the acts of three men, two of whom are immortal and this was stark luck, because none of the trio would have injured him intentionally. The first of these was Gene Tunney, the second Jack Dempsey and the third Charles A. Stoneham, president of the New York Giants.

Fugazy really was a success back in 1926 when Tunney then the new heavyweight champion of the world, cast a shadow across his path that has remained to this day. He had promoted the Italian Hospital Fund Show, with a triple headline program involving Greb and Walker, Harry Whits and Charles Weinert and Dave Shade and Jimmy Slattery; also a light heavyweight championship between Delaney and Berlenbach and a near championship bout between Wills and Jack Sharkey.

He was a dangerous rival of the Garden crowd and, as such, Tunney selected him as a pawn for a bit of diplomatic maneuvering. Tunney actually was tied up with the Garden on a hang-over agreement from the first Dempsey fight but he openly declared his intention of signing with Fugazy and held several conferences with him, the outcome of which was the announcement that Fugazy had offered him $750,000 for his next fight.

However, when this had had the desired effect of raising Rickard's ante, Tunney promptly forgot Fugazy, met the Garden's junketing special train at St. Louis and signed, as he was duty bound to do, from that moment, Fugazy's prestige began to wane.

It was dissipated still further from time to time as he made bids for prominent fighters and was unable to hold them. His disability in this respect was partly due to the fact that he never had an indoor arena and thus couldn't hope to monopolize a fighter's services while giving the latter no chance to make money until the outdoor season. He didn't help his position, either, with his flamboyant announcements of arena structures that never got out of the draftsman's office.

Meantime, he was promoting many shows at Ebbets Field in Brooklyn and none of them made money all night long. He couldn't get into New York because the Garden always blocked his way at the Yankee Stadium and the Polo Grounds with options that brooked no invasion by an outside promoter. Stoneham finally tired of the arrangement and was all set to go with Fugazy last year as an independent combine.

But the Garden, fearing for its monopoly, put over a fast one. It arranged with the Yankees and Giants to share equally in the shows promoted at each park and Stoneham, placated, decided to play the hand out on this basis. In doing this, he left Fugazy's prestige without a leg under it and then Dempsey came along to for $50,000 on the line and, after wait-kill it altogether.

John actually tied up with the maning some months ago something to happen, quietly withdrew, not neglecting to take the $50,000 with him. This finished Fugazy—apparently for all time—for he soon was glad to sell his interest in Schemling and Campolo to the rival Garden coterie.

But it seems that the end is not yet. He had run through a fortune while traveling downward from a sumptuous suite in the Woolworth Building to a few rooms over a cigar store. Yet he apparently wants to run some more. Pure optimism, that. If he runs at all, he knows it must be uphill. His down-grade running has carried him as far as he possibly can go in that direction.

RIVERSIDE THEATRE

"America's boy friend" has a new sweetheart, and a mighty sweet one, too. In "Half Way to Heaven," which opens tonight for the first time in a two-day run at the Riverside Theatre, Charles (Buddy) Rogers, as fine and lovable screen personality as he is, has to share honors with lovely Jean Arthur. She's a honey.

And the story is a honey, too. In fact the whole entertainment is on that action, romance, comedy order which makes one of the most enjoyable evenings possible.

Buddy breaks into carnival life in "Half Way to Heaven" and does some dangerous stunts on the flying trapeze which will keep your heart in your mouth for several minutes. It is a new and daring role and Buddy certainly looks convincing in the part. Physique! That boy has it. After thrilling you with his daring, Buddy stands up to Paul Lukas and, in a fist fight which looks realistic enough for anybody, he sends the villain packing and wins the girl.

"Half Way to Heaven" is a new type of story for Buddy but he fits it as well as he did "Close Harmony" and "Illusion." Of course it's all talking and the "boy friend" has a few choice things to tell the girl-friends who visit him today, tomorrow or Wednesday at the Riverside Theatre.

The Qualities of Leadership

By JOHN G. LONSDALE
President American Bankers Association

LEADERSHIP and success, in a general way, are synonymous. They are both founded upon simple codes of thought and action, upon the realization that he who wins the laurels must be a deer, not a waterer, that application of energy, not time or luck, is what counts most. A rabbit's foot is a poor substitute for horse sense.

Both success John G. Lonsdale, and leadership, if they be of the highest quality, are the result of service to humanity. Service has been aptly described as "the supreme commitment of life." Analyze the lives and times of all great leaders of history and you will find that those whose names are enshrined in the hearts of their countrymen are those who sought to render a needed service to the populace.

Leadership, like success, need not, however, be international or national to achieve great results. There is room for each of us to be a leader in his community, in his work, in his church, and in various organizations.

One of the indispensable qualities of leadership is the ability to persist steadfastly in the face of discouragements. If George Washington had not possessed the quality of persistence, he and his soldiers would never have survived the hunger and privations which were theirs at Valley Forge.

We have too many young men and young women these days saying a job cannot be done. Too many spend their time explaining why a thing can't be done, instead of saying, with firm resolve, that it can be done, and then going out and doing it. Anything that ought to be done is capable of being done. And anything worth doing at all is worth doing well. The fellow who handles a little job in a big way is always on the road to greater fields.

BANKERS STUDY CHAIN BANKING

The Economic Policy Commission of the American Bankers Association has been specifically instructed by the general convention of the association to study and report on chain and group banking developments, and also on the proposal of the Comptroller of the Currency for an extension of branch banking in the national banking system, to permit those banks to conduct branches in the trade areas surrounding their locations.

R. S. Hecht, President Hibernia Bank and Trust Company, New Orleans, Louisiana, is chairman of the commission. The members are: George E. Roberts, Vice President National City Bank, New York, N. Y., vice chairman; Nathan Adams, President American Exchange National Bank, Dallas, Texas; Leonard P. Ayres, Vice President Cleveland Trust Co., Cleveland, Ohio; Frank W. Blair, Chairman of Board Union Trust Company, Detroit, Michigan; Walter W. Head, President Foreman-State National Bank, Chicago; W. D. Longyear, Vice President Security-First National Bank, Los Angeles, California; Walter S. McCluskey, Chairman of Board Commerce Trust Company, Kansas City, Missouri; Max B. Nahm, Vice President Citizens National Bank, Bowling Green, Kentucky; Melvin A. Traylor, President First National Bank, Chicago; Paul M. Warburg, Chairman of Board International Acceptance Bank, New York, N. Y.; O. Howard Wolfe, Cashier Philadelphia National Bank, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania; Gordon Edwards, American Bankers Association, New York City, secretary.

A survey showing the extent to which chain and group banking has developed in the United States has been made and issued in booklet form by the American Bankers Association of New York City.

SECTIONS WHERE SAVINGS DECREASED

A regional analysis of the drop in the nation's savings deposits in banks, as recently reported by the American Bankers Association's Savings Bank Division in its annual compilation for 1929 showing the first recession in national savings in the twenty years during which it has published this data, reveals that all sections except the New England and the Pacific States groups recorded losses.

The published figures showed that on June 29, 1929, the total savings deposits in banks and trust companies of continental United States stood at $28,217,656,000, which was $195,305,000 below the similar total for 1928, when there was an increase of $2,300,000,000.

The regional analysis by state groups discloses, however, that the six New England states as a group gained more than $58,800,000 in savings, while these seven Pacific states as a group gained over $79,000,000 in deposits and nearly 275,000 in number of depositors. The gains in these two sections, however, were smaller than the gains recorded there for 1928. The sections which showed losses are the Middle Atlantic States, Southern States, East Central States and the West Central States.
